LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

JANUARY 3, 1927

To the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel:

The Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, acting as the technical staff of the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel of the American Library Association, herewith submits its third and final report, based on the study carried on during the last three years. The essential part of the report is the outline of the classification and compensation plans but there are also included an explanation of the work, and a number of exhibits and tables, as well as the preliminary report of the Committee on Schemes of Library Service relating to public libraries.

This final report is much more nearly complete than the two previous reports dated respectively June 30, 1925, and December 31, 1925. Thanks to the many helpful suggestions received from those in the library profession and from others, it is also more nearly free from error. At the present stage of personnel administration, however, it is not possible to develop either a classification or a compensation plan which is perfect; the plan submitted in this report undoubtedly contains many defects which should be remedied in whole or in part through further intensive study and through the experience that is accumulated in the course of time.

The study, we believe, has been carried on in accordance with accepted principles and with the best practises yet developed; certainly the best thought of the library profession and of those experienced in scientific classification and compensation work has been made available for the Committee's technical staff. The total cost of the study to the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, including the printing of this report, is in excess of $12,000. The value of the time given without charge by those engaged in library work and by others is probably even greater. Whatever it is possible to do in this pioneer work of developing classification and compensation plans for a whole profession appears to have been done.

We should like to point out that whatever may be the merits or demerits of this particular report, it represents a serious attempt to formulate the personnel standards and ideals of the library profession in such a manner as to make them available for the use of individual library administrators. Such standards and ideals, however, should not be looked upon as static but rather as constantly changing. Even if the report were completely successful in attempting to reduce to writing today's standards and ideals of the library profession, modifications would be desirable in order to reflect different standards and ideals which the profession may in the future set for itself or which changing economic and employment conditions may enforce. We therefore regard it as an essential step in giving effect to the work already done that the library profession, through the American Library Association, provide for a small, strong committee to take up the work of developing the classification and compensation plans where the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration is leaving it, and of encouraging the adoption and proper administration of these plans in individual libraries. The Bureau and its staff stands ready to cooperate with such a committee by giving consulting advice, by collecting and analyzing data and handling other clerical work, or by acting as its technical staff.

It is a matter of regret to us that we cannot publicly express our appreciation not only to the leaders of the library profession but also to many of the rank and file who have willingly cooperated in the work carried on during the last three years. A list of the libraries which had members of their staff fill out questionnaires is given in an appendix of the report; in addition, many librarians have at frequent intervals given advice and counsel regarding troublesome problems called to their attention. Those skilled in classification and compensation work have been equally generous with their time. So numerous are these persons that it is impossible for us to do more than make this all-inclusive acknowledgment of their invaluable aid and to express our conviction that without such aid the report could hardly have merited your serious consideration.

Faithfully yours,

BUREAU OF PUBLIC PERSONNEL ADMINISTRATION

By FRED TELFORD, Director

1. SUMMARY OF FINDINGS

The findings of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, acting as the technical staff of the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel of the American Library Association, may be briefly summarized as follows:

A. AS TO TYPES OF LIBRARY ORGANIZATION

1. That something approaching a standard type of organization for a library of any size in a given field has been evolved but that the type of organization varies widely among medium, large, and small libraries rendering almost or exactly the same kinds of service.

2. That, despite the approach toward standard types of organization, the internal variations are numerous, and in some cases fundamental, among libraries of the same size attempting to give almost or exactly the same kinds and amounts of service.

3. That diversity in type and details of organization is made necessary by the different services rendered by libraries of different kinds, by the differences in size and character of staff, and by differences in buildings, topography, and other local conditions, but that this diversity is greater than is necessary or desirable with regard to many operations exactly the same that have to be repeated over and over in nearly every library.

B. AS TO THE QUALIFICATIONS OF LIBRARY WORKERS

4. That in many of the smaller libraries, and particularly in the public libraries where only one, two, or three persons are employed, the library workers as a rule do not have the education, library training, library experience, and other qualifications essential for the effective performance of the duties of their positions.

5. That in the large and in many of the medium size libraries a high grade personnel is regularly secured; and that in particular

(a) The abstract intelligence of library workers is absolutely and relatively high, a very large proportion making A and B scores in the army alpha intelligence tests and the average scores being higher than in most other professions or than among normal school, college, and university students.

(b) The educational standards vary widely, there being very few library workers engaged in professional work with less than a high school education, many with college training or technical library school equipment, or both, and a low proportion with a college education including or supplemented by a technical library course one or two years in length.

(c) A high proportion of those in the important positions rate very high in abstract intelligence and have either a college education and a technical library course, or several years of library experience, or both.

6. That there is a marked tendency among library administrators to place a high value on formal education and knowledge of foreign languages and to place a lower value on abstract intelligence and knowledge of the physical and social sciences.

C. AS TO COMPENSATION

7. That the compensation for positions involving the performance of similar duties and the exercise of equal responsibilities and calling for the same qualifications (that is, for positions of the same class) show wide variations and marked inequalities within the same library and still wider variations and inequalities between libraries in different communities, even when due allowance is made for geographical location and differences in the standards and costs of living in various parts of the country.

8. That the general level of compensation for library workers of practically all grades is low, both in view of their abstract intelligence, education, and experience, in view of the rates of pay for those of similar or lower attainments in other fields, and in view of the minimum amount of money required to sustain, in accordance with the standards expected of library workers, an adult who is a self-supporting, economic unit of society.

9. That there are many inequalities in the relative rates of compensation for different classes of library workers; and in particular that those holding minor and important supervisory positions are as a rule inadequately compensated as compared with the heads of libraries and with those holding non-supervisory positions.

D. AS TO CERTAIN EMPLOYMENT AND OTHER CONDITIONS

10. That existing titles for positions whose duties and responsibilities are substantially alike vary widely, are often lacking in descriptiveness and suggestiveness, and are sometimes actually misleading.

11. That the typical library worker must work during different hours on different days of the week and on occasion work in the evening and on holidays and Sundays but that from 38 to 42 hours constitute a normal week's work.

12. That extra compensation for night, holiday, Sunday, or overtime work is seldom allowed but compensatory time off for any such work is usually granted.

13. That library workers as a rule are allowed approximately 30 days of annual leave with pay, though in a few libraries the amount is as little as 15 days; that in most cases all or nearly the entire amount of annual leave with pay allowed is taken; that the amount of sick leave with pay allowed varies widely; that the average amount of sick leave with pay taken by those engaged in library work in the libraries studied was somewhat less than six days for the year covered by the data; and that about 35 per cent of the library workers in the libraries studied took no sick leave in the year covered by the data.

E. AS TO THE CAUSE OF SOME OF THE CONDITIONS MENTIONED

14. That no comprehensive classification or job analysis of library positions for use in fixing rates of compensation, in testing, certifying, and training employees, in handling transfers, in making promotions, and in providing a common terminology for employment, budget, and other purposes has been made and put into effect.

15. That the library profession has never developed any standards generally accepted to guide individual librarians, library boards of trustees, and budget officers in fixing the rates of compensation for library workers of different classes and has developed no adequate working plan for relating the compensation to the character and importance of the work for which salaries are paid.

16. That the absence of classification and compensation plans representing the considered thought and having the full approval of the library profession places the individual library administrator at a tremendous disadvantage in securing adequate appropriations for personal services from reluctant appropriating bodies or from legislative bodies that fix the library tax rate.

17. That because of the lack of trained library workers many libraries are compelled to divert a considerable proportion of their funds and energies to the training of new employees engaged in professional or semi-professional library work.

2. SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS

The Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, acting as technical staff for the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel, makes the following recommendations in the belief that their adoption will assist in bringing about and maintaining equitable and reasonably uniform compensation for the same kind of library work, will make it possible to secure, retain, and fairly reward competent library workers, and will secure something approaching the maximum return in loyal and efficient personal services for the compensation paid:

1. That the classification and compensation plans given in this report, as modified and amended from time to time, be formally approved by the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel and by the American Library Association and be used as far as practicable for employment, budget, administrative, and other purposes in public, state, university, college, normal school, and high school libraries.

2. That the American Library Association create a permanent small committee (with not more than five members) to make studies designed to perfect the classification and compensation plans and from time to time to recommend amendments as experience show how improvements can be made and as employment, economic, and library conditions change.

3. That the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel and the American Library Association recommend to the heads of libraries that they, as rapidly as may prove feasible, adopt the class titles and put into effect the compensation rates set forth in the classification and compensation plans.

4. That any library adopting the approved classification and compensation plans in whole or in part administer these plans substantially in the manner set forth in the recommended rules covering this matter.

5. That whenever library workers are employed hereafter according to the compensation rates set forth in the approved compensation plan, the minimum qualifications and also to the greatest possible extent the desirable additional qualifications set forth in the approved specifications be required ; and in addition, that even where funds are not available for payments for personal services in accordance with the approved compensation plan, such qualifications be insisted upon as nearly as possible.<sup>1</sup>

6. That authorities in schools for the training of library workers, in setting their standards and planning their courses, bear in mind the minimum and desirable qualifications and the rates of compensation set forth in the approved classification and compensation plans.

7. That the committee mentioned in recommendation 2 above be authorized and directed to secure the coöperation of interested individuals and organizations, both inside and outside the library profession, in developing standardized tests for use in determining the qualifications of those seeking appointment to the various classes of library positions set forth in the approved classification plan.

<sup>1</sup>It should be recognized that any scientific determination of rates of compensation must be based upon a sound classification of positions, but that there may be a scientific classification of positions used for selecting employees, governing transfers, and handling numerous other employment problems without using it as a basis for compensation. In other words, a scientific classification plan is essential for developing a scientific compensation plan, but a classification plan, when developed and adopted, need not necessarily be used for compensation purposes, though such a use is logical and desirable. The compensation levels, moreover, may be moved up or down without affecting the relative correctness of the rates for the various classes of positions.

3. SUMMARY OF BENEFITS

The Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, acting as technical staff for the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel, is of the opinion that the adoption of the proposed classification and compensation plans (as modified and amended as the result of further study), and of the proposed methods of administering these classification and compensation plans when finally put into effect in individual libraries, will bring about the following benefits to the library profession, to library boards of trustees or other governing bodies, to appropriating and tax levying bodies, to the heads of individual libraries, to library workers, and to the general public:

A. TO THE LIBRARY PROFESSION

1. A detailed analysis and classification of the different kinds of library work.

2. Definite standards and qualifications for the various classes of library positions and workers.

3. A common terminology for the various kinds of library work which will make available for all the accumulated experience of the profession with regard to any class of library positions.

4. Conscious recognition of the high personnel standards now observed in many libraries, including abstract and social intelligence, education, experience, and knowledge of library policy, organization, procedure, aims, and service.

B. TO LIBRARY BOARDS OF TRUSTEES OR OTHER GOVERNING BODIES

5. A statement of the library profession's ideas, ideals, and standards of personnel.

6. A means of making reliable comparisons of personnel and rates of compensation with other libraries.

7. A means of controlling expenditures for personal services, a sound and practical working basis for arriving at proper rates of compensation, and the assurance that the sums of money appropriated for library positions of different classes are equitably distributed on the basis of the value of the work performed.

Main C. TO APPROPRIATING AND TAX LEVYING BODIES

8. A method of finding out in outline or in detail the kinds of personal services for which funds are asked.

9. A basis for judging the needs of the library in the way of personal services and funds for the payment thereof.

D. TO THE HEADS OF INDIVIDUAL LIBRARIES

10. A means of presenting the personnel needs of the library to the library board of trustees or other governing body, to the appropriating and tax levying bodies, and to the general public.

11. A terminology such as to make possible definite comparisons with other libraries.

12. A basis for developing tests to use in selecting and promoting library workers and for developing service rating plans to facilitate estimating and recording the relative worth of employees filling any class of library positions.

13. A means for arriving at and presenting schedules of compensation, approved and supported by the whole library profession, such as to attract, fairly reward, and retain a competent staff.

14. A fair and just basis for handling salary adjustments as a substitute for dealing with the requests and demands of individual employees.

15. A formulation, bearing the approval of the library profession, of those matters relating to personnel which from their inherent nature pertain to the position itself rather than to the person holding it, thus making it possible to concentrate on those personnel matters which depend upon personal characteristics and qualifications.

16. All of the direct and indirect benefits that come from a fair and business-like compensation policy and a contented personnel.

E. TO LIBRARY WORKERS

17. A general increase in the level of compensation and relief to those library workers inadequately paid.

18. Justice in the relation between the compensation received and the value of the work performed.

19. Assurance that other library workers doing the same kind of work are compensated according to the same salary schedule.

14 CLASSIFICATION AND COMPENSATION PLANS

20. Graduated schedules of compensation which provide higher rates of pay for those who, because of study and experience, have increased their usefulness to the library and to the public served.

21. Reasonable assurance that the schedules of compensation will from time to time be changed in view of changes in employment and economic conditions and in library standards.

22. A means of knowing what qualifications are necessary and desirable for the higher positions, the preparation that should be made to qualify for these positions, and the opportunities open to those choosing library work as a career.

23. The incentive to act that comes from knowledge of an assured reward for successful accomplishment—advance in pay for immediate increased usefulness in the same class of work and higher compensation upon promotion to a higher class of work.

F. TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC

24. Reasonable assurance that the money given libraries for personal services is being spent according to a carefully developed plan which, in a broad way at any rate, represents the best thought and has the full approval of the library profession and assures a reasonable return in the way of service by qualified library workers.

4. PREVIOUS ATTEMPTS TO DEVELOP CLASSIFICATION AND COMPENSATION PLANS FOR PROFESSIONS

Few attempts have been made, at any rate in the United States and Canada, to develop scientific classification plans and compensation plans for whole professions or, indeed, for considerable fractions of such groups. Probably the most successful of these has been that for the engineering profession which was worked out in 1919 by a committee of the Engineering Council, and presented in a leaflet of seventeen pages under the title "Report of Committee on Classification and Compensation of Engineers."<sup>1</sup> The proposed classification was based upon returns from 6378 engineers, all but about 600 of whom were grouped as follows:

Service	Number	Average annual compensation
States and counties .....	387	$2735
National governments .....	575	2899
Municipalities .....	764	2994
Technical schools .....	262	3240
Railroads .....	814	3325
Private companies .....	2198	4240
Consulting engineers .....	620	6737
Contractors .....	165	7678
Total .....	5785	$4032

The Engineering Council committee did not work out a detailed classification plan with classes but did name the following eight "grades" for which the salary recommendations given were "suggested for discussion":

Grade number	Grade name	Total years of experience required to qualify		Salary range
		With professional degree	Without professional degree	Minimum	Maximum
8—Junior Aid .....			0	$1080	$1560
7—Aid .....			2	1680	2400
6—Senior Aid .....			5	2520	3240
5—Junior Assistant Engineer.		0	4	1620	2580
4—Assistant Engineer .....		2	6	2700	4140
3—Senior Assistant Engineer.		5	9	4320	5760
2—Engineer .....		8	12	5940	No limit
1—Chief Engineer .....		12	16	8100	No limit

<sup>1</sup> This report is no longer in print and copies are unobtainable except as they can be found in public, university, engineering, or other libraries.

16 CLASSIFICATION AND COMPENSATION PLANS

The various grades were defined in from two to ten printed lines and the qualifications to be required were set forth entirely in terms of education and experience, though equivalents were defined with some care. Following is the statement for grade 5, Junior Assistant Engineer:

Duties: Under immediate supervision, to perform work involving the use of surveying, measuring, and drafting instruments; to take charge of parties on survey or construction work; to design details from sketches or specifications; to compute and compile data for reports or records; to inspect or investigate minor details of engineering work; or to perform routine tests of apparatus, material, or processes.

Qualifications: No experience required other than that involved in securing a professional degree upon the completion of a standard course of engineering instruction in an educational institution of recognized standing; but in the absence of such degree, a high school education or its equivalent is required and at least four years of experience in the use of surveying, measuring, or drafting instruments, or the computation and compilation of engineering data, together with evidence of a knowledge of the fundamentals of engineering science sufficient, with further experience, to qualify for the higher professional grades. The completion of each full year of such standard course of engineering instruction shall be considered as the equivalent of one year of experience.

The following statement of experience equivalents for post graduate work was also included:

The completion of each full year of post graduate work in the specific subject of study or investigation appropriate to a particular service or branch of service shall be considered the equivalent of one and one-half years of general experience, but such substitution shall not thus be made for more than four years of such experience or be considered as reducing the requirements in any grade of the number of years engaged in the conduct or direction of responsible work.

Many of the titles in common use were listed and their allocations to the various grades indicated.

The manner in which the kind of specialization might be indicated in the title is shown by the following partial list of engineering specialties to be included in the Senior Assistant Engineering grade:

Senior Assistant Electrical Engineer
Senior Assistant Mechanical Engineer
Senior Assistant Mining Engineer

Senior Assistant Chemical Engineer
Senior Assistant Bridge Engineer
Senior Assistant Sanitary Engineer
Senior Assistant Tunnel Engineer
Senior Assistant Highway Engineer
Senior Assistant Sewer Engineer
Senior Assistant Topographical Engineer
Senior Assistant Hydraulic Engineer
Senior Assistant Geodetic Engineer
Senior Assistant Designing Engineer
Senior Assistant Landscape Engineer
Senior Assistant Structural Engineer

A much finer classification plan for a small part of the engineering profession was worked out by the Committee on Specifications for Highway Engineering Positions of the American Association of Engineers, of which Mr. A. B. McDaniel of Washington, D. C., was chairman.<sup>2</sup> This classification plan covers only highway engineering positions but is worked out in considerable detail. It is based on elaborate questionnaires which were sent to about 2700 highway engineers in all parts of the United States. The report did not include recommendations as to compensation.

When the allocation of District of Columbia library positions in the federal service was being made to services and grades as set forth in the personnel classification act of 1923, a committee of librarians, of which Mr. Miles O. Price was chairman, prepared a booklet of 94 pages which was submitted to the Personnel Classification Board as embodying the recommendations of the library workers affected.<sup>3</sup> Owing to the fact that the Personnel Classification Board refused to establish classes as required by the personnel classification act, the committee perforce confined itself to a statement of the reasons why professional library positions should be allocated to the professional and scientific service as defined by the act and to an amplification and application of the service and grade definitions included in the act so as to indicate with some clearness how individual positions should be allocated and what qualifications should be required. An interesting part of the leaflet is a suggested plan for grading federal government libraries in accordance with a scale of points. The special purpose for which this report was prepared precluded the committee from working out a scientific classification plan with classes named and defined; nevertheless it was eminently successful in that the allocations of library positions under the act are considered more equitable than the allocations for any other large group of positions occurring in a considerable number of departments and bureaus.

It was the measure of success achieved in these attempts to work out classification and compensation plans for professions or parts of professions which led the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration to propose to the American Library Association that, working in coöperation, they develop classification and compensation plans for the whole library profession.

5. THE AIMS OF THE STUDY

Anybody giving serious attention to personnel problems in a large organization is soon struck by their complexity. The selection of new employees, their training following appointment, the determination of proper rates of pay, the making of promotions and transfers, the handling of salary adjustments, the development of service rating plans, the prevention of unnecessary separations, the granting or withholding of annual and sick leaves, the encouragement of punctuality and interest—all these demand constant attention. The functions of the organization, moreover, cannot be economically and effectively carried out unless wise decisions as to policies and as to individuals are made.

In dealing with any problem of such complexity the wise procedure is, where possible, to break it down into simpler elements. This is the course generally followed where conscious attention is given to personnel problems. For many years it has been the policy of the most progressive personnel administrators to make the first or primary separation of the whole into parts on the basis of those things which are inherent in the position itself and not those which are inherent in the individual holding the position. This makes it possible to look at the position—an impersonal thing—in an impersonal manner, and later to consider personal characteristics as fully as need be in dealing with the individual who holds or is being considered for the position.

There are two fairly common types of organization. With the first, which often produces remarkable results in the hands of unusually competent administrators, the organization is built around one or more persons. As a rule, however, this type does not work particularly well for less favored individuals. Always it has the disadvantage of requiring its originator or some equally competent person with the same ideas and methods to operate it efficiently; and seldom can it be "institutionalized." Administrators not so happily and liberally endowed customarily have recourse to a different type of organization, in which the functions to be performed are clearly stated, the plan of organization most likely to be effective in exercising these functions is determined, the positions needed in each department, branch, division, section, or other organization unit are specified, and qualified persons are found to fill each position. This type of organization possibly never functions as well as the other one at its best; it has the advantage, however, of not requiring more of its head than the non-genius can give, of being capable of "institutionalization" in the sense that it can be made permanent, and of enabling the head and his principal assistants to take advantage of all the experience accumulated by the race. Since men and women of genius are rare, while those of lesser ability abound, this second type of organization is very common.

In the library field both types of organization are found. The library administrator of unusual ability who has an organization built about his or her personality may feel no need for classification and compensation plans and may, in fact, believe that he would be hampered by them. But library administrators who operate on the other plan—and they are by far more numerous—are likely to feel the need and recognize the usefulness of such tools in dealing with their personnel problems.

Both types of library administrators are keenly aware of the fact that the importance of library work and of properly remunerating library workers is not appreciated by the general public or by those who hold the purse strings. The compensation of librarians with high educational attainments, who have fitted themselves for professional work by taking technical training courses and by years of experience, is as a rule little or no higher than that of clerks and stenographers without such qualifications. Skilled tradesmen, of a relatively lower type intellectually than librarians, customarily receive higher salaries than library workers with unusual attainments. Even in many library organizations the journeyman bookbinder or engineman is paid more than the trained library worker and sometimes, as far as remuneration is concerned, the janitor who merely keeps the room clean and orderly is on a par with the professional librarian who selects and loans books. It may be argued with considerable merit that the value of the work done by any professional group is not and should not be measured by monetary rewards. Nevertheless when due allowance is made for such considerations the fact remains that the devices heretofore used by library administrators have not secured from appropriating bodies the funds which are considered necessary by librarians as a body for the proper support of their activities and for the equitable remuneration of those engaged in library work.

No claim is made that the use of scientific classification and compensation plans will automatically solve all personnel problems in a library or other organization; they simply represent one of the means by which resources can be pooled in dealing with certain aspects of such problems. When the duties of the various positions have been determined, when the naming and grouping of the positions have been accomplished, when the schedule of compensation for each group (class) of positions has been decided upon, the problem of finding the right individual, of providing the working conditions and incentives which will enable him to perform his tasks profitably and happily, of measuring the efficiency of his work, all remain. There can be little doubt, however, that these purely personal matters, all pertaining to the individual, can be attacked with a better chance of success if previously the impersonal matters, which concern the position only, are first disposed of by some such device as classification and compensation plans.

The classification—or, as it is frequently called in the industrial world, the job analysis—of positions, sounds formidable. The idea, however, is simple. In effect an occupational or duties classification of positions or a job analysis of positions means merely that those positions sufficiently alike that matters concerning them can be handled in the same way are grouped together, are given a common title which, as far as may be, is descriptive of the duties of the positions and of the work done by their incumbents, and are defined in terms of the duties performed, the responsibilities exercised, and the qualifications required for the successful performance of such duties and the successful exercise of such responsibilities.

It was the recognition of the fact that personnel conditions in the library profession are capable of considerable improvement which led to the creation of the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel at the meeting of the American Library Association held at Hot Springs in 1923. Previous to that time various committees had been studying different phases of the library personnel problem. The newly created committee was so constituted as to contain representatives of the various committees dealing with library personnel work and was authorized and directed to attack the whole problem in a broad way. In particular, the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel was authorized to secure and analyze data, to recommend the steps to be taken to place the library profession on a par with other recognized professions, to make it possible for the individual librarian to use the best thought of the whole profession in dealing with his own personnel problems and devising means for selecting a competent personnel, and to work out a plan of remunerating library workers justly.

At the outset the members of the committee perceived that any scientific attack on any library personnel problem must be based upon a classification or job analysis of library positions. Such a classification is necessary first of all for providing a common terminology which will make it possible for different librarians to understand each other when they discuss common problems or attempt to pool their knowledge. It is a prerequisite for putting into effect the generally accepted principle of "equal pay for equal work," as without it there is no reliable and easy means of telling what kinds of work are "equal." It is essential in developing written or other tests to select persons performing library work and in promoting to higher posts those best fitted for advancement. It is the only means by which the library profession can make known to library boards, tax levying and appropriating bodies, and others their personnel needs. In short, the committee recognized that at the present stage of personnel administration a classification or job analysis of positions is essential for a scientific attack upon library personnel problems.

The committee therefore decided to develop a classification of library positions showing the different kinds of library work and the qualifications considered necessary for each kind (that is, to develop a classification plan) and also to formulate a schedule of compensation for each class of positions recognized (that is, to develop a compensation plan).<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For fuller and more accurate statements of the meaning of the terms "classification plan" and "compensation plan," see pages 4, 5, and 7, of E. O. Griffenhagen's "Classification and Compensation Plans as Tools in Personnel Administration," published by the American Management Association, 20 Vesey Street, New York City.

6. STATEMENT OF FUNDAMENTAL POLICIES

In view of the classification and compensation studies made in the public service and industry in the last fifteen years, it was possible at the outset for the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel to lay down certain fundamental policies to guide it, its members, and its technical staff. These fundamental policies may be briefly stated as follows :

1. The classification is a classification of positions and not of persons.

2. All positions involving substantially the same kind of work are to be grouped together in the same class under a common title regardless of their geographical or department location, and neither the efficiency of the present incumbents nor any qualifications that they may happen to possess or lack nor any other facts, depending solely on their personality are to be considered in the classification of the positions.

3. The kind of work for any position is to be determined by its duties and responsibilities, the surrounding working conditions, and the organization relationships.

4. Positions are to be considered to involve "substantially the same kind of work" only when all of the following four requirements are met:

- (a) The same descriptive title may be used to designate the positions.
- (b) The same qualifications as to education, experience, intelligence, knowledge, ability, personal traits, and other qualifications may be demanded of incumbents.
- (c) The same tests of fitness may be used to choose qualified workers.
- (d) The same schedule of compensation may be made to apply with equity.

5. Positions as they exist and not as they might be or ought to be are to be classified and as far as possible classes are to be set up to which all existing positions can be allocated.

6. Schedules of compensation are to be developed for classes of positions and not for individual positions; such schedules of compensation are to be applicable to all positions included in the same class and hence to the incumbents of such positions.

7. The schedule of compensation for each class of positions is to provide a minimum rate, normally but not necessarily always payable on appointment; a maximum rate, to be the highest that an employee can attain while occupying a position allocated to the class; and normally one or more intermediate rates in contemplation of a provision for advancement from the minimum rate through the intermediate rates to the maximum rate as the value of the services rendered increase, due not to change in duties but to increased usefulness owing to additional experience.

Frequently some question arises as to the policy expressed in the paragraph above numbered five. In particular, it is sometimes urged that because the organization of some library is faulty, or because the procedure for handling certain work in a particular library is not the best, or because the tasks to be performed might be distributed among the different positions so as to achieve more effective results, the classification plan developed should reflect an ideal to strive for rather than conditions as they actually exist. There are various reasons why it has seemed wiser to classify positions as they actually are than to attempt to classify them as they ought to be. The most compelling is that the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, which has had to do a large amount of the detailed work, does not consider itself capable of determining an ideal type of library organization, even if it is admitted that all libraries of a given kind should be alike. In addition, those few classifications which have been based upon ideal rather than actual conditions have received scant consideration from administrative officers and have not proved particularly useful either in bettering conditions or in handling day to day personnel problems. In view of these and other considerations, it seemed best to the committee to adopt the policy of developing a classification plan which provides a class for every position as it actually exists and to assume that the classification plan will be modified if necessary as library administrators change the number and kinds of positions in their organizations.

7. DEFINITIONS OF CERTAIN FUNDAMENTAL TERMS

The science of personnel administration has not yet been developed to the standard where there is a universally accepted terminology. Certain conceptions are so important, however, that in a discussion such as this it seems desirable—indeed, even essential—to define a few terms so that their exact meaning as they are used in the report will be understood. The following terms are those most widely used and the definitions show the meanings which are commonly given to them, not only in this report but also in common practise:

“Position” means an office or a place of employment such that its duties are performed and its responsibilities are exercised by one person.

“Class” or “class of positions” means a group of positions so nearly alike that the same descriptive title may be used to designate them, that the same requirements as to education, experience, intelligence, knowledge, ability, and other qualifications may be demanded of incumbents, that the same tests of fitness may be used to choose qualified workers, and that the same schedule of compensation can be made to apply with equity.

“Classification plan” means a written statement setting forth in orderly fashion for each of the classes of positions:

- (a) The class title.
- (b) The definition showing the positions to be included in and the positions to be excluded from the class, supplemented where necessary by examples of typical tasks.
- (c) The qualifications considered necessary and desirable for the successful performance of the duties of any position allocated to the class.
- (d) As far as is feasible, the lines of promotion from lower classes and to higher classes.

“Schedule of compensation” or “compensation schedule” means a statement showing for a given class of positions the minimum, intermediate, and maximum rates of compensation.

“Compensation plan” means a written statement showing as a minimum a list of class titles with the compensation schedule for each class.

“Promotion” means a change of an employee from a position in a lower class to a position in a higher class for which a higher maximum rate of compensation is prescribed.

Throughout this report the terms defined above are used with the exact meanings given.

8. THE COLLECTION OF THE FACT MATERIAL

The decision of the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel to base its findings and recommendations to the fullest extent upon facts forced at the very outset a consideration of the means of getting the necessary fact material. Experts in the classification field generally recognize the necessity, when a classification plan is to be developed, of getting detailed facts with regard to the duties and responsibilities of a sufficient number of positions to constitute a fair sample of the whole group. Such facts, moreover, must be supplemented by organization charts, statements of functions undertaken and services rendered by the organization in which the positions studied are located, and a number of other matters, including for libraries the size and nature of the book collection, the amount and sources of income, the purposes for which the funds available are spent, and the size and kind of population served.

In order to secure the necessary facts, it was decided to ask a number of selected libraries to fill out a questionnaire for each position found in these libraries. A rather detailed analysis of library tasks was made and a comprehensive questionnaire<sup>1</sup> prepared asking for detailed information with regard to the duties of the individual positions and also data regarding the education, experience, and qualifications of the persons holding those positions. The librarians were asked to have a questionnaire filled out, verified, and returned to the committee for each position in their respective organizations.

Naturally a number of difficulties were encountered in securing the information desired. In the end, however, detailed data for about 150 libraries including some 6000 individual positions were secured. These libraries, in the opinion of the committee, constitute a fair sample of public, state, university and college, normal school, and high school libraries, but the returns from other types of libraries were not numerous and representative enough to justify the committee in making the classification and compensation plans broad enough to include positions in these types of library organizations. The committee therefore decided to omit from the classification and compensation plans worked out at this time positions in special libraries and some other types of libraries; also not to attempt to provide in the classification and compensation plans for a number of the highly specialized positions in the Library of Congress, though the data supplied by this organization were very helpful in working out the classification and compensation plans proposed.

In brief, the fact data secured and used by the committee include the following:

1. Detailed information regarding 6000 positions in about 150 libraries, secured through questionnaires.

2. Additional information regarding the size and character of the book collection, the book circulation, the finances, and other related facts supplied by the heads of these libraries and by the American Library Association.

3. Data collected by other committees of the American Library Association and published statements prepared by the American Library Association and the library journals.

4. Information furnished in personal conferences by individuals and groups of individuals engaged in library work.

In addition, a considerable number of persons who have had wide experience in developing classification and compensation plans in other fields of activity gave advice and made suggestions and criticisms freely at practically every stage of the work.

9. THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE CLASSIFICATION PLAN

In developing a classification plan for a whole profession or, indeed, for all or part of the service of a city, county, state, or federal government, or for an industrial concern, a number of difficulties are encountered, even after the fact material has been obtained. The methods of dealing with some of these problems have been very well worked out; with others, however, much experimental work remains to be done. In view of this situation, it seems desirable to discuss briefly some of the difficulties encountered in developing the classification plan given in this report. The following points are discussed:

1. Determining the classes of positions to be recognized.
2. The plan of terminology for the class titles.
3. The form and scope of the definitions of the various classes.
4. The qualification requirements, including education, experience, abstract and social intelligence, knowledge of library organization, procedure, policy, aims and service, knowledge of foreign languages, and personal traits.
5. Lines of promotion.
6. The basis for allocating libraries of a given kind to grades.

The first and probably the most important problem in developing a classification plan is deciding upon the classes of positions to be recognized. Experience shows that it is impossible for different people with the same body of facts to come to exactly the same conclusions as to what classes should be set up. In general there are two groups—those who would have few classes, each to include positions varying a great deal not only as to their duties and responsibilities but also as to the character of the work, and those who would have just as many classes as are needed to meet the four requirements stated in the definition of class given above. In practice, the latter group is undoubtedly gaining the ascendancy. The reasons, moreover, are perfectly obvious. Classes which meet these requirements are the only kind that are useful in developing a compensation plan, in developing tests to select qualified employees, and in providing a terminology which is sufficiently definite for working purposes. The committee therefore determined to recognize the classes which in its judgment are actually needed and to be governed entirely by the facts at its disposal in deciding upon such classes without being hampered by an arbitrary restriction that not more than 20 or 50 or 100 or 200 classes all told should be recognized. The list of classes given in appendix 1 appears lengthy but even so it is still incomplete; library work has become quite specialized and a large number of classes is necessary if existing conditions are to be reflected in the classification plan.<sup>1</sup>

Following the analysis of the data at hand and the decision as to classes to be recognized, there arises the important question of the scheme of nomenclature to be used in selecting class titles. It is highly desirable that the class titles be suggestive and descriptive of the work done by the persons holding positions allocated to the various classes; that the titles be brief so that they can be used for administrative, employment, budget, and other purposes; that the titles accord as far as possible with existing practise; and that the titles to some extent at least indicate organization relationships in the larger and more complex library organizations.

It is naturally impossible to meet fully all these requirements in deciding upon a scheme of nomenclature. As many as twenty-five different titles, for example, were found in use to designate positions the duties of which are substantially similar. An example of the existing confusion is the following list of titles used to <sup>1</sup>It cannot be pointed out too frequently or too emphatically that no attempt has been made to have the classification plan outlined in appendix 1 reflect a model or even a usual type of organization. The purpose throughout the study has been to provide a class in the classification plan to which every position actually found to exist can be fairly allocated. Quite frequently it has appeared to the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration that in a particular library more effective and more economical administration might be secured if there were more or fewer positions of a given kind and if the duties attached to some of the existing positions were distributed in a different fashion. This feeling, however, has not been allowed to show itself in the classification plan proposed; that is based upon positions as they were actually found to exist in 1924. If at any time existing types of library organization are changed so that classes of positions as defined in this report are no longer needed or if new classes are required, the classification plan should be changed accordingly.

It should be pointed out, too, that the classification plan outlined in appendix 1 appears to be more complex than it really is because it provides a place for practically every position in numerous libraries of different types. The lists given in appendix 2 show that the number of classes of positions occurring in an individual library is only a fraction of the total number listed in appendix 1.

The scheme of nomenclature recommended by the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration is indicated in the titles. The salient features may be stated as follows:

1. The relative rank of classes of positions in a given library is indicated by descriptive adjectives, such as "junior" "senior," "special," and "supervising."

2. Where there are supervisory positions in different libraries whose duties are of the same nature but which vary as to the degree of responsibility exercised (such as the head of a small cataloging department in one library and the head of a much larger cataloging department in another library), the main part of the title is exactly the same but the difference in responsibility is indicated by a supplementary designation (for example, Chief of Catalog Department, Grade 1 and Chief of Catalog Department, Grade 2). It should be noted, however, that the last two words of such titles are needed only when the scheme as a whole is presented and may be dropped for actual working purposes within any library.

3. The word "Librarian" is reserved as a part of the title for those positions whose incumbents act as the head (or assistant to the head) of a geographically separated library unit (such as a public library, a college library, a branch library, or a school library).

4. The organization relationships are indicated by making all or part of the name of the department a part of the title for many of the classes of positions found in the larger libraries where there is a relatively fine division of labor and considerable specialization (for example, Senior Circulation Assistant and Senior Assistant, Work with Children).

The whole scheme of nomenclature is believed to be so simple as readily to be comprehended. The terms have been so selected as to involve relatively few changes in the best existing terminology. Some changes of course are necessary if a considered plan of naming positions is to be substituted for the existing confusion. In particular, such established terms as "Reference Librarian" and "Children's Librarian" had to be given up to meet the third requirement above; such terms as "Substitute" had to be eliminated as being an indication of status rather than duties; and the term "Supervising Assistant" is used as more suggestive, descriptive, and definite than the common "First Assistant." The plan proposed is not regarded as the final word but is submitted as something tentative which should be improved at those points where it is weak. Attention is called to the tremendous importance of having short descriptive titles which can be used for administrative, employment, and budget purposes; comparatively few people ever look further into the duties and responsibilities of a position than the title itself and if this is vague, ambiguous, or misleading a corresponding impression results.

In defining the classes of positions it is important that two requirements be met—the definition should indicate with the greatest possible clearness what positions are to be included in and excluded from the class, and should also picture clearly to the professional librarian and concretely to the layman the nature of the work done by those holding positions allocated to the class. In order to meet both of these requirements, it is usually necessary to divide the statement into two parts, the first corresponding to the definition of a word given in an unabridged dictionary and the second corresponding to the examples following the definition.

It would be too much to claim that the definitions of the classes are the best possible. They have been worked out with considerable care and have been submitted to librarians and others for criticisms. There will often be doubt, nevertheless, whether a given position, constituting what is often referred to as "a borderline case," belongs, for example, in the senior or special rank. Experience with these class specifications will undoubtedly show too that in some cases the proper line of demarcation between classes has not been discovered or that the wording is not such as to make the meaning unmistakable. In giving examples of typical tasks only those kinds of work have been mentioned which are common to a considerable percentage of the positions tentatively allocated to the class; those librarians who have gone over the class specifications point out that many of these tasks ought not to be performed by employees holding positions of that particular rank but it has seemed wise on the whole to stick to the existing facts as furnished through the questionnaires rather than to attempt to decide what are proper and improper tasks for an individual whose position is allocated to a given class.

Whatever their shortcomings, the statements of duties and the examples of typical tasks have the virtue of a considerable body of facts behind them. When it comes to the qualification statements, however, the situation is much less definite and concrete. The tables in appendix 3 of this report indicate the extreme diversity of the education, library training, and library experience of almost a thousand library workers performing the same tasks. One of three things is evident—either library administrators have not yet discovered what combinations of education, library training, and library experience are necessary for the successful performance of these kinds of library work; or, having discovered such facts, they have not been able to secure employees with the education, library training, or library experience they consider desirable; or for a given kind of work there is more than one combination of education, library training, and library experience which fits different individuals to perform their duties efficiently. With regard to other kinds of qualifications, the situation is even more confusing. Apparently little conscious attention has been paid to abstract and social intelligence; considerable emphasis has been placed upon purely personal traits, but no satisfactory methods of measuring such traits have been evolved; ability to operate the typewriter has been expected of high grade library workers who at best are indifferent typists and whose compensation in any case is too high to justify their employment in typing work; and the formulation of the amount and kind of knowledge to be required has been to a very large extent neglected. Under the circumstances it has been impossible for the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, acting as the technical staff for the committee, to make any statement of minimum and additional desirable qualifications which is more than an intelligent surmise. The existing practise has, as far as possible, been observed and analyzed; the opinions of presumably competent persons both inside and outside the library profession have been obtained; some experimental work has been done; and recourse has been had to some principles which have obtained a reasonable degree of recognition among educators and librarians. It is clearly recognized, however, that the qualifications which are a part of the specifications for the various classes of positions are in the nature of opinions rather than final statements.

An inspection of the specifications for the various classes of library positions as given in appendix 6 of this report will make evident the plan which was followed in stating qualification requirements. For each class of positions the minimum qualifications which are considered essential for the successful performance of the duties of any position allocated to the class are stated; following this for most classes is a list of additional qualifications considered desirable, though not to be absolutely required. In general the qualifications set forth, either specifically or in general terms, the requirements with regard to the following:

1. Education.
2. Library training.
3. Library experience.
4. Abstract intelligence.
5. Social intelligence.<sup>1</sup>
6. Knowledge of library organization and work (general and special).
7. Personal traits.
8. Other qualifications.

As has always been the case when the development of a classification plan has been attempted, certain desirable traits which are common but by no means universal are taken for granted and are never stated in the qualification requirements. Among these are such qualifications as honesty, industry, sobriety, and a sense of order.

<sup>1</sup> By abstract intelligence is meant the ability to make adjustments to new situations involving abstract ideas; it is measured with some degree of accuracy by the army alpha intelligence tests, the Otis intelligence tests, and other tests devised for the purpose. By social intelligence is meant the ability to make adjustments to new situations involving contact with other people; as yet no measure of social intelligence as accurate as the army alpha tests in measuring abstract intelligence have been devised.

It is only fair to state some of the considerations which governed the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration in formulating the qualifications for the various classes of positions. After consulting at length with numerous librarians and others, including the members of the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel, it was decided that for most classes of positions different combinations of education, library training, and library experience should be regarded as satisfactory. This accords both with existing practise and with the beliefs, based upon observation and experience, of a large number of leaders in the library profession who have given conscious thought to the subject. A smaller proportion were inclined, for the professional classes of positions, to prescribe a hard and fast requirement that graduation from a university or college be required and that no equivalent be accepted; those who held to this opinion, when confronted with the facts, were outnumbered in every gathering where the subject was discussed, except as to professional positions in university and college libraries. The minority may of course be right in its stand on this matter, as minorities often are; nevertheless the committee felt that inasmuch as many persons who are not college graduates actually are filling important library posts with apparent success, and the majority of professional library workers are against making a college degree an absolute requirement for most classes of library positions, it would not be wise or expedient to write such a requirement into the qualification statements except for certain classes of positions.

In this connection it should be pointed out that no claim is made that the different combinations of education, library training, and library experience enumerated in the various class specifications are exactly or even approximately equivalent. It may be seriously questioned, in fact, whether any two combinations ever can be equivalent or, indeed, whether any two persons attending the same university or college during the same years and taking the same courses from the same instructors have an equivalent education. There will inevitably be differences in the mental equipment, the interests, the industry, and the aptitude of these two students which make their college educations, obtained apparently under identical conditions, quite different things. What is claimed is that each of the combinations enumerated represents the education, library training, and library experience of a sufficiently large number of individuals performing with apparent success the kind of work defined to indicate that such a combination does afford a fair prediction of probable success. Whatever may be the opinions or beliefs of others, the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration does not consider it possible to decide on theoretical grounds that any particular combination of education, library training, and library experience should be required for any class of library workers when a great deal of experience indicates that persons with other combinations succeed. More particularly, the wisdom of requiring an excessive amount of formal education seems doubtful in view of the high abstract intelligence of those doing library work and the highly educational nature of the work itself.

The statements in the qualification requirements for the various classes dealing with knowledge of library organization, procedure, policy, aims, and service, with personal traits, and with social intelligence represent little more than guesses based upon such facts as could be gleaned from the questionnaires, from conferences with librarians and others, and from an analysis of library work. So little conscious attention has been given to these things that there is no recognized terminology, as far as the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration is aware, for conveying even the rather inexact ideas that have to be expressed. It is recognized that the requirements as stated are unfortunately general and vague.

The requirements with regard to knowledge of foreign languages written into the qualification statements are lower than, in the opinion of most of the librarians consulted, is desirable. These relatively low requirements (they seem to the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration rather high) result not from any feeling that a knowledge of foreign languages is not desirable in library work but rather from a feeling that other knowledge may be even more desirable. The race has accumulated so much information that it is beyond possibility even for a genius to become master of all of it; and those whose talents fall short of genius must pick and choose with some care. Library work from its nature is such that almost any information the library worker may happen to possess is likely to be of use at some time or, indeed, to be helpful in the performance of the daily tasks. If a large proportion of the time library workers spend in school is to be given to a study of foreign languages, other subjects must be neglected, since the whole field of human knowledge cannot be covered. In the opinion of the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, librarians as a group have emphasized a knowledge of foreign languages at the expense of even an elementary knowledge of the physical and social sciences which are inextricably bound up with many of the important things in our modern civilization. Examples could be cited of library workers able to read several foreign languages and familiar to some extent with the literature in those languages who know practically nothing of economics, statistics, psychology, biology, physics, and chemistry; for example, the library profession as a whole seems largely ignorant of the recent developments in intelligence tests which bid fair to revolutionize our conceptions of ourselves and which have already found an important place in educational practise and in other phases of modern life. It seems unquestionable that those who advocate high requirements as to reading knowledge of modern foreign languages and the literature in those languages have not proved their case, as they often assume, when they have shown that such knowledge has some value; they need to show also that such knowledge is of greater value than other kinds of knowledge and that it can be obtained without making it unlikely that these other kinds of knowledge will be almost or completely neglected. It is realized, however, that the situation is involved, since a knowledge of foreign languages is essential in working with certain library tools and certain groups of the population; in many college and university libraries, moreover, a very large part of the library material is in foreign languages. The qualification statements represent the extent to which the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration considers knowledge of library administration and subject matter may properly be sacrificed for the sake of proficiency in foreign languages.

From the outset it was considered desirable to include in the qualification statements standards with regard to abstract intelligence. Few reliable data with regard to the abstract intelligence of library workers were available when the study began. Therefore it was decided to carry on some experimental work. The experiments and the results are described in the following chapter of this report.

Another troublesome problem is finding a basis for determining the grade to which the position held by the chief librarian or by the chief of a department shall be allocated. It must be evident even to the uninformed that the person at the head of a catalog department with a staff of three full time assistants exercises quite different responsibilities from the chief of a catalog department in a larger library who has a staff equivalent to thirty full time assistants; likewise that the person acting as chief librarian in a public library with a staff of eight, an annual budget of $12,500, a book collection of 35,000, and an annual book circulation of 95,000 exercises quite different responsibilities from the head of a public library with a staff of 200, an annual budget of $300,000, a book collection of 375,000, and an annual book circulation of approximately 2,000,000.

After careful consideration of the subject and consultation with numerous librarians and others, it seemed advisable to make the size and character of the staff the sole basis for determining the grade of the chief position in circulation, catalog, reference, and other departments and in branches and some other units. Working out the proper classification of libraries has proved to be extremely troublesome and has been accomplished with a reasonable degree of satisfaction only for public libraries. For the purpose of the class specifications for Chief Librarian in the various classes of public libraries as given in appendix 6, the classification included in the preliminary report of the Committee on Schemes of Library Service, which is printed in full as appendix 7, has been accepted by the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, though the qualification requirements are not always in accord with the committee's recommendations and the salaries recommended by the Bureau likewise vary somewhat from those set forth in the committee's report. For other types of libraries—high school, normal school, college, university, and state—no satisfactory standards have been developed and the size and character of the staff is for the time being taken as the sole basis for the various classes. At this point, however, attention is called to the fact that the classes of high school, normal school, college, university, and state libraries should be based upon a number of factors analagous to but not identical with those set forth for public libraries in the preliminary report of the Committee on Schemes of Library Service.

The data furnished on the questionnaires indicate that library workers, particularly in the lower ranks, change from one kind of specialized work to another with considerable freedom. In many cases such changes represent tremendous losses; the library worker, for example, who has qualified herself to do high class work with children through study and experience and who transfers to branch or reference work with adults must throw away much of the knowledge acquired in the course of years. To the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration it has seemed that many other shifts in the kinds of library work performed entail considerable, even though smaller, losses. In view of the frequent changes from one kind of specialized work to another made by library workers, it was considered unwise to attempt at this time to specify even the principal lines of promotion to and from the various classes.

10. THE ABSTRACT INTELLIGENCE OF LIBRARY WORKERS

Since 1917 numerous tests for determining abstract intelligence have been devised. It was found, however, that practically no reliable data were available with regard to the abstract intelligence of library workers. The committee regarded the determination and stating of levels of abstract intelligence as so important that arrangements were made with a number of libraries to give the army alpha intelligence tests to all or part of their staffs. The scores made by 296 library workers comprising all or parts of the staffs of eight large and medium size libraries and the students in two library training schools were distributed as shown in the following table (the highest possible score, 212, has been made by only one of the two million or more persons who have taken the army alpha tests):

The high level of abstract intelligence among library workers can be judged from the fact that the median score of the whole white population is only 63, as against 146 for the library groups tested. Comparisons with highly selected professions and with university, college, and normal school students also show that librarians rank high in abstract intelligence.

A particularly valuable comparison, since most library workers are women, is with women students in colleges and normal schools. Following is a table showing the distribution of army alpha scores and certain other significant facts for 2659 women:

11. THE DEVISING AND USE OF TESTS FOR MEASURING QUALIFICATIONS

The statements of minimum and additional desirable qualifications for the various classes of positions as given in appendix 6 presuppose that tests have been or will be devised to determine, first, whether a person seeking appointment to a position of a given class possesses the minimum qualifications necessary and, second, the relative excellence of those who meet the minimum requirements. It need hardly be pointed out that librarians concerned with personnel matters in choosing persons for appointment to library positions have always had more or less definite standards in mind and have used formal or informal tests in making their choices. The qualification statements, however, are believed to be more definite than those generally set up by individual librarians for their own use and they probably make more evident the need of standardized tests for the measurement of the qualifications specified.

For some of the qualifications the measuring problem is relatively easy. This is true in those cases where a definite kind and amount of education, library training, or library experience is specified; even there, however, difficulty is encountered in securing the facts to determine definitely the character of an educational course and, of course, differences of opinion prevail as to what may be called "successful" experience and whether a given library is one "using modern methods." Likewise for abstract intelligence there are a number of tests which give fairly reliable and comparable results.

For most of the qualifications listed as necessary or desirable, it must be confessed that at the present time there is no generally accepted measuring device and certainly nothing worthy to be called standardized tests. Practically all librarians are agreed that any person originally appointed to a position in a library should have a good deal of book knowledge, that this knowledge should become more extensive and more definite through the experience gained, and that anybody promoted to a higher post should have an increasingly wide fund of book knowledge. The staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration was unable to learn, however, that librarians have any definite standards relating to book knowledge which are comparable to such a standard as "abstract intelligence equal to or greater than that represented by a score of 135 in the army alpha intelligence tests"; or that there are any generally accepted tests to measure book knowledge to determine whether it measures up to such standards as library administrators have in mind.

Book knowledge, it will be recognized, is one of those things for which definite standards and definite tests can be devised. Not as much can be said for the measurement of some of the other qualifications. There is little hope, for example, that in the immediate future, at any rate, it will be possible to specify with any definiteness what constitutes "pleasing personal appearance" or "a pleasant voice."

Between the extremes mentioned above, there are many gradations. It is the opinion of the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration that at the present stage of personnel administration it is perfectly possible, by making use of the experience which has already been accumulated and by doing considerable experimental work, not only to formulate standards for most of the qualifications specified for the various classes of library positions which will be accepted by librarians themselves but also to devise tests which will determine much more accurately than has been the case in the past whether a given individual measures up to the minimum requirements or the extent to which he goes beyond such requirements. Developing such standards and tests is not a simple task which should be undertaken lightly with the idea that it can be carried to completion in a short time. As a matter of fact, the best thought of the leaders in the library profession and of persons skilled in developing and devising tests will be necessary for some years in establishing the standards and developing suitable tests. The acceptance of the classification plan will carry with it as a necessary corollary the undertaking of such work if its full benefits are to be realized. Librarians for the present must of course continue to measure as accurately as possible the qualifications of those they appoint or promote, using written tests in some cases and in others relying upon their estimates of individuals following inquiries and interviews; it is hardly conceivable, however, that they can long remain content with the unreliable and otherwise imperfect measuring devices now available.

12. THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE COMPENSATION PLAN

Many attempts have been made both in the public service and in industry to develop a compensation plan for large numbers of positions. A great deal of experimental work has been done in developing the principles which ought to be observed and in applying these principles to concrete situations. It must be admitted, however, that the development of a compensation plan, while it may be based upon principles accepted as scientific, is as yet far from an exact procedure. Those who have given most thought to the subject are generally agreed that among the factors to be considered in fixing rates of pay for any class of positions are the following:

1. The character of the duties performed.
2. The amount of supervisory, research, or other responsibility carried.
3. The extent to which incumbents are responsible for determining matters of policy.
4. The existing rates of pay.
5. The social worth of the work.
6. The opportunity or lack of opportunity for promotion.
7. The value of the work in preparing for more lucrative employment in other fields.
8. The hazards of the occupation.
9. The requirements in the way of education, technical training, experience, and knowledge of the occupation or profession.
10. The desirability or undesirability of the work and the regard in which it is held by the general public.
11. The requirements as to fixity or change of abode.
12. The conditions under which the work is performed, including hours, vacations, and working quarters.
13. The compensation for other groups doing similar or comparable work.
14. The cost of living according to the standards generally observed or expected.

Nobody, however, has ever seriously attempted, except on a very small scale for a part of some trade or occupation, to determine what weight each of these and other factors should receive in arriving at the compensation for any class or group, and certainly no mathematical formula has been evolved which makes it possible for different people to take the same set of facts and arrive at the same conclusion as to just rates of compensation. In the end any schedules of compensation evolved in the present state of our knowledge must represent the more or less arbitrary judgment of some individual or group, even when such factors as those mentioned above are taken into consideration.

The compensation schedules proposed for the various classes of library positions are subject to all the limitations stated and implied above. At best, they represent the disinterested judgment of the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration as to what it would be fair for the library profession to set forth to the public as its present conception of proper rates of compensation for library workers under present conditions. Unfortunately these schedules can and will be unfavorably criticized from many angles. Those library workers who have secured the most favorable consideration in the way of compensation will certainly feel that many of the rates are too low. Others who have not been so fairly treated will consider that many of the rates are so much above those prevailing at present as to be fantastically high. Some library administrators will regard the rates as so low as to hamper them in securing appropriations, while other of their colleagues will hesitate to submit such high salaries for the serious consideration of their governing bodies. Arguments which deserve serious consideration can unquestionably be advanced to show that the proposed levels of compensation should be revised upward or downward, that some of the rates are too high or too low in their relation to others, or that individual rates should be raised or lowered.

The manner of arriving at the various rates of pay is obviously too complex and too technical to be presented with any degree of completeness in a report like this. It seems desirable, however, to explain briefly how the rates were arrived at. In this compensation study as well as in others carried on in recent years, there are a few so-called "key" rates which serve as a basis for all of the others. The three important "key" rates are as follows:

1. The $1200 beginning rate for Junior Assistants. This is the rate which to a considerable extent determines the caliber of the majority of those who enter library work. This rate was decided upon after considering the factors enumerated above and after consultation with many leaders in the library profession. It is considerably above the entrance rate now commonly paid in most libraries but does not seem to the staff of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration nor to the leaders in the library profession too much to ask for adults, frequently living away from home, who are required to be of a high mental type and who are expected to be self-supporting economic units of society.

2. The $1980 maximum rate for Senior Assistants. This is the rate which determines to a considerable extent the caliber of the people who will be retained in library work, as it is the point above which most of those in the library profession at any given time cannot go owing to the fact that the number of higher positions carrying higher rates of pay is limited. This rate likewise was fixed upon only after consideration of the factors mentioned above and after consultation with many leaders in the library profession. It is above the analogous rates commonly paid at the present time but below the cost of living as generally calculated for those who are expected to observe the standards of living expected of library workers.

3. The $10,000 rate which is the highest sum specifically mentioned for any class of positions. This rate is of some importance because, taken in connection with the $1980 maximum rate for Senior Assistants, it determines the range into which the rates for all supervisory classes of positions from the highest to the lowest must be crowded.

A fourth rate of almost equal importance is the $1620 beginning rate for Senior Assistants; this represents the amount recommended for the college graduate who has had no experience other than such as may be secured in vacations during the college course or as a part of the technical training during the college course. On the basis of the data obtained, this appears to be approximately the amount which the college graduate with technical training but without experience may obtain in other professions.

When these three or four rates have been fixed, the maximum and minimum rates for all other classes of positions have also been determined within relatively narrow limits because of the relationship that exists between the duties and responsibilities of positions allocated to the other classes of positions.

In this connection it should be pointed out that the recommended schedules of compensation are believed to represent more closely the relative worth of the various kinds of library work than they do the absolute worth. In other words, it would be possible to choose different "key" rates, either higher or lower, so as to fix higher or lower compensation levels and to retain without material change the relative rates for the various classes of positions. As a matter of fact, it is suggested that such a course be followed in individual libraries that are unable to obtain funds for the payment of rates as

13. THE PERFECTING, ADOPTION, MAINTENANCE, AND ADMINISTRATION OF THE PROPOSED CLASSI- FICATION AND COMPENSATION PLANS

The need for further work in developing the proposed classification and compensation plans must be obvious to any person who gives them study. There are many gaps to be filled; in particular, classes should be set up and defined for positions of such character that there is only one in a given library and for groups of positions in libraries with a unique or peculiar type of organization. No satisfactory standards for use in allocating state, normal school, high school, and other types of libraries to the appropriate class have been developed and undoubtedly work still remains to be done in perfecting the standards for public libraries. The classification plan at least—and possibly also the compensation plan—should be extended to provide for the engineering, printing, bindery, janitor, and other staffs not engaged in library work proper but necessary for the maintenance and operation of large library plants.

At the risk of being considered repetitious, it seems worth while at this point too to point out that no classification or compensation plan can ever properly be regarded as a finished product. The classification plan may at a given time be as nearly perfect as human ingenuity can make it but within a period of a few months some library will develop a new type of organization calling for a different method of allocating duties to individual positions and this in turn will involve changes in the classification plan if it is to fit new conditions. As will readily be recognized, one good type of organization is determined by the work to be done and the conditions under which it is to be performed; the classification plan should be changed to fit the type of organization found effective and should never under any circumstances determine the type of organization. Likewise the compensation plan may at a given time be as nearly perfect as careful study by librarians and others can make it, but changing economic conditions within a few years or a few months may make it impossible to secure or retain competent employees at the rates provided or changes in the ideals and standards of the library profession may make it desirable to raise or lower the rates for particular classes of positions. The aim, therefore, should be to make the classification and compensation plans as good as is humanly possible at any given time and to provide the means for amending them as experience is accumulated and as economic, employment, and library conditions change. It is for this reason that the creation of a small permanent committee of the American Library Association to perfect the classification and compensation plans and to suggest additions and amendments when conditions change is recommended.

The adoption and administration of classification and compensation plans in any particular library inevitably involves a number of difficulties. The period of adjustment while changes are being made is bound to be a trying one even when the old conditions are recognized as bad and the new conditions are recognized as good. It has, therefore, been considered advisable to suggest definite rules for adopting, applying, and administering the classification and compensation plans in individual libraries. These rules, it is believed, show with considerable definiteness the points to be covered and set forth one method of meeting each problem as it arises. It is hardly to be expected, however, that the rules as formulated can be put into effect in any library without change; the relationship of the head of the library to his staff and to his governing board, for example, varies a great deal and changes in the proposed rules would necessarily have to be made in view of the relationship that actually exists. Likewise changes relating to other matters would generally be necessary in the case of the individual library. The rules set forth what is generally regarded as the best practise that has yet been evolved and it is hoped they will afford a basis for drafting definite rules for individual libraries.

<sup>1</sup>In appendix 1 only the class title and the recommended schedule of compensation and, in the case of some supervisory classes of positions, some of the required standards are indicated. The complete specifications for the various classes, as far as they have been worked out, are given in appendix 6 in the alphabetical order of the titles. The standards for determining the various grades of supervisory positions, as far as they have been developed, are included in part in the class specifications or, for the classes of chief librarians of public libraries, in the preliminary report of the Committee on Schemes of Library Service given in appendix 7; it should be understood that where such parenthetical expressions as "4 to 6 full time assistants" are given along with the title of the class in this appendix there may be and often are other requirements, such as that some of the assistants shall be of a particular grade or rank or, in the case of Chief Librarian of a public library, that certain requirements as to budget, book collection, and type of organization be met. In other words, the list given in appendix 1 is merely an outline which does not necessarily contain all the significant facts; frequent reference to the complete class specifications or to the report of the Committee on Schemes of Library Service is advised.

<sup>1</sup>The tables in appendix 1 are intended primarily to show how the complete classification and compensation plans work out when applied to individual libraries of various types. It is obvious that the number of titles needed for any one library—and therefore the number of classes of positions—is much less than in the classification plan as a whole, which provides a place for every position in many libraries of different sizes, types, and forms of organization. A casual inspection of the existing and proposed compensation rates shows that the latter are very much higher than the former. In this connection, it should be pointed out that without exception the "existing" titles and rates are those of the last half of 1924, when the questionnaires furnished the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel were filled out. Since that time there have been many changes in the organization of these libraries as well as in the duties of positions and the rates of pay; where compensation rates have changed, the adjustments have almost uniformly been upward. An effort has been made to omit any items which would make possible the easy identification of any of the libraries.

APPENDIX 4

PROPOSED RULES FOR ADOPTING, APPLYING, AND ADMINISTERING THE CLASSIFICATION AND COM- PENSATION PLANS IN AN INDIVIDUAL LIBRARY

Rule 1. Classification Plan. The classes of positions as named and defined in Schedule A, "Specifications for Classes of Positions in the ..... Library," with such amendments thereto as may be made under these rules from time to time, and as interpreted in these rules, shall constitute the classification plan for the ..... Library.

Rule 2. Allocation of Existing Positions to Classes. Every position in the ..... Library existing when these rules take effect, or hereafter created, shall be classified under the classification plan by allocation to its appropriate class. Such allocation shall be made by the Chief Librarian, with the approval of the Board of Trustees. Whenever a position has been allocated to its appropriate class, the title of such class shall forthwith become the title of such position and shall be used in payroll records, in budget estimates and allowances, in the employment of library workers, and in all similar administrative and employment processes and records.

Rule 3. Amendment of the Classification Plan. The Chief Librarian, with the approval of the Board of Trustees, may from time to time amend the specifications for any class, and may abolish, merge, or divide existing classes, or create new classes.

Rule 4. Classification of New Positions. Whenever a new position is established or the duties of a position are so changed that, in effect, the old position as described by the specifications of the class to which it was originally allocated no longer exists, but in its place there is created a new position of a different class, the Chief Librarian shall classify or reclassify the position by allocating it to its appropriate class in accordance with the classification plan in effect. Whenever the allocation of a position to a new or different class from that in which it has previously been carried has been made by the Chief Librarian and approved by the Board of Trustees, the Chief Librarian shall decide, on the basis of general regulations then in effect, whether the position of the new class shall continue to be held by the incumbent of the position of the old class, and if so on what terms, and if not the manner in which the new position shall be filled.

Rule 5. Interpretation of Class Specifications. The specifications of classes of positions in the classification plan are hereby declared to have the following force and effect:

(a) They are descriptive only and not restrictive. They are intended to indicate the kind or kinds of positions that should be allocated to the respective classes, as determined by their duties, responsibilities, and qualification requirements. The use of a particular illustration as to duties or the requirement of a particular qualification shall not be held to exclude others not mentioned if such others are similar as to kind or quality.

(b) In determining the class to which any position should be allocated, the specifications for each class shall be considered as a whole. Consideration is to be given to the duties, examples of typical tasks, responsibilities, required and desirable qualifications, and relationships to other classes as affording together a picture of the positions that the class is intended to include.

(c) As to the particular parts of the class specifications, the following principles of interpretation shall apply:

(1) The statement of duties shall be construed as a general description of the kind of work involved in a position that may properly be allocated to the class, and not in any sense as prescribing what the duties of the position shall be, nor as limiting the expressed or implied power of the authority vested with the right to prescribe or alter the duties of any position; provided, however, that where a substantial change of duties is made, except for a temporary period or by the addition of duties that are incidental to the main employment, such change shall be reported by the Chief Librarian to the Board of Trustees with a view to a possible reallocation of the position.

(2) The examples of typical tasks shall be construed as examples only, illustrative of the duties as defined by the general statement. These examples are not intended to be complete or exclusive, and the fact that the actual tasks performed by the incumbent of a position do not appear therein shall not be taken necessarily to mean that the position is excluded from the class, provided that the tasks constituting the main work or employment are duly covered by the general statement of duties. On the other hand, any one example of a typical task, taken without relation to the general statement of duties and all other parts of the class specifications, shall not be construed as determining whether a position should be allocated to the class.

(3) The statement of minimum and additional desirable qualifications constitutes a part of the class specifications and is to be construed as expressing the standards which persons appointed hereafter to any position in the class must meet. Such qualifications as should properly apply to all or many classes of positions—such as age more than 18, honesty, loyalty, sobriety, and industry—are to be taken for granted although not specified.

Rule 6. Compensation Plan. The compensation schedules for the various classes of positions as set forth in Schedule B, "List of Classes of Positions in the . . . . . Library, Giving the Schedule of Compensation for Each Class," as interpreted in these rules and with such amendments as may be made under these rules from time to time, shall constitute the compensation plan for the . . . . . Library.

Rule 7. Interpretation of Compensation Schedules. The compensation schedules shall be construed as follows:

(a) The rates of pay are in terms of dollars per year, except where the symbol "c" meaning "cents" is shown, in which case they are in terms of cents per hour. Wherever a rate either in terms of dollars per year or cents per hour is prescribed it shall be permissible to pay equivalent compensation on any other time basis when in the interests of the . . . . . Library; provided, however, that in determining the equivalent amount on a different time basis the total earnings for full time during a 12-month period shall be taken as the basis for determining equivalency.

(b) The rates of pay prescribed are understood to represent the total remuneration, including pay in every form. Where allowances are provided, such compensation in kind shall be treated as part payment, to be deducted from the money salary or wage to the extent of 80 per cent of their full cash value as appraised and established for each case by the Chief Librarian and approved by the Board of Trustees.

(c) In every case in which part compensation for an employment exclusive of overtime is paid by some outside agency, such as the school board, or from a different fund or account, such payments shall be deducted from the compensation due at the prescribed rate, in the payment of the employee concerned.

(d) All rates prescribed in the schedule of compensation represent the standard rates of compensation for full time employment. Where employment in a position for which annual rates are prescribed is on a part time basis, only the proportionate part of the annual rate for the time actually employed shall be paid; that is, the ratio of the actual rate for part time service to the full time rate prescribed by the scale of pay shall be the same as the ratio of the hours actually employed to the total numbers of hours per year represented by full time employment. The number of hours to be used as a divisor in determining such ratio shall be established by the Chief Librarian and approved by the Board of Trustees. The time consumed in going to and from the place of employment shall not be considered in computing the time actually employed except in the case of those employed part of the day in one branch or library and part in another.

Rule 8. Operation of the Compensation Plan. The scales of pay in the compensation plan are hereby declared to have the following force and effect:

(a) The lowest, or minimum, rate in the scale for any class shall be the entrance rate payable to any person on the first appointment to a position allocated to the class; provided, however, that where a person already in the service of the . . . . . Library is transferred, demoted, or promoted or a former employee is reemployed in a position in the class, he shall enter the position at the same rate as he has been receiving, if there is such a rate in the scale, and, if not, at the rate next higher than the rate he has been receiving. However, if the rate received in the former position is higher than the maximum for the class, he shall receive the maximum rate.

(b) The highest or maximum rate in the scale for any class shall not be exceeded in the compensation paid to the incumbent of any position allocated to the class; provided, that an employee whose rate at the time of taking effect of these rules exceeds the maximum thus prescribed may continue at the rate during his incumbency and as long as the position occupied remains in the same class.

(c) Advances in compensation from the minimum to the maximum rate shall be by successive steps, after the completion of a prescribed period of meritorious service at the next lower rate, upon evidence satisfactory to the Chief Librarian that the employee advanced in compensation has attained and maintained a prescribed standard of efficiency and has served for the prescribed period in the position at his then rate. In the absence of any regulation to the contrary, the prescribed period of service required for an increase in compensation under this section shall be at least 12 months. Where intermediate rates are prescribed by the scale of pay applicable, the advance in rate when authorized shall be to the next higher rate in the scale. Increases in compensation shall become effective at the next quarterly date, July 1, October 1, January 1, or April 1, following their approval by the Chief Librarian. Throughout these rules the procedure governing increases in rates of pay is limiting and not mandatory, and no increase is to become effective unless specifically authorized and unless the necessary appropriation of funds therefor has been made.

Rule 9. Amendment of the Compensation Plan. Whenever in the judgment of the Chief Librarian not enough qualified applicants can be secured to meet the needs of the Library by reason of the fact that the schedule of compensation for a given class is too low with relation to other classes or to similar or related outside employments, he shall propose to the Board of Trustees a revised schedule of compensation for such class, and also for any related classes the rate for which would be thrown out of due relation by the adoption of such revised schedule. The Chief Librarian shall likewise propose revisions downward whenever, in his opinion, there is reason to believe that the existing rates of compensation are too high. Such revised schedules of compensation shall become effective when approved by the Board of Trustees.

Rule 10. Adjustment of Existing Rates to the Compensation Plan. The following rules shall be used in determining the compensation of incumbents of positions at the time of the taking effect of these rules to bring such rates into conformity with the compensation plan:

(a) The rate of pay of an employee receiving less than the minimum prescribed for his class shall be increased forthwith to such minimum; provided, however, that no increase in rate under this provision shall be made to exceed 20 per cent of the rate then in effect in any one year.

(b) The rate of pay of an employee receiving more than the maximum prescribed for his class shall not, because of the application of these rules, be reduced during his incumbency of the same position and class, but the rate of pay of his successor in the same position and class shall conform to the schedule of compensation prescribed by the compensation plan.

(c) The rate of pay of an employee now paid at a rate between the minimum and the maximum of his class, which does not correspond with any intermediate rate, shall be adjusted to the next higher rate for the class.

APPENDIX 7<sup>1</sup>

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SCHEMES OF LIBRARY SERVICE

The Committee on Schemes of Library Service has had little to report since the first years of its appointment when it prepared the very tentative outline which it presented at Chicago in 1923, except to say that it was awaiting the results of the work of the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, otherwise known as the Telford Committee.

That Committee made a second provisional report which was distributed at Chicago, December 31, 1925. Though the work was not in final form, enough had been done to enable our committee to make a start toward accomplishing that for which it was originally appointed—that is, the working out of a plan for the grading of library positions. Two members of this committee, Miss Florence Overton and the chairman, were also members of the Telford Committee and therefore were able to select from the mass of material presented in that report the definite information needed for our

<sup>1</sup> At the request of the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, the Committee on Schemes of Library Service generously consented to the publication of its preliminary report with the Bureau's report to the Committee on the Classification of Library Personnel. The work of the two Committees is inextricably tied up and the membership of the Committees also overlaps somewhat. The Staff of the Bureau wishes to make acknowledgment of the assistance given by the Committee on Schemes of Library Service, and particularly by Miss Rathbone and Miss Overton, in developing standards for determining the various classes of public libraries. The members of the Committee on Schemes of Library Service are as follows:

Josephine Adams Rathbone, Chairman
A. L. Bailey
Charles H. Compton
Gratia A. Countryman
Louise G. Hinsdale
Franklin F. Hopper
John A. Lowe
Florence Overton
Grace D. Rose
Charles E. Rush
Elizabeth Smith
P. L. Windsor.

200 CLASSIFICATION AND COMPENSATION PLANS

purpose. We realize that but for the body of information collected and digested by the Bureau of Public Personnel Administration, our task would have been far more difficult, and that whatever value the result may have is largely due to it.

The figures used in our report we have based on actual library statistics furnished by A. L. A. Headquarters based on 1924 reports, modified slightly by A. L. A. standards of per capita circulation and budget and by the desire to set standards that shall approach reasonable ideals. The maximum budget for each class of library represents only the A. L. A. minimum standard of $1 per capita, which the committee strongly recommends as a minimum rather than a maximum.

To make clear the diagram which contains the gist of our report, we print here (with some modifications) the classification of public libraries into classes which the two members of the Telford Committee worked out with Mr. Telford—a classification into 14 classes instead of the 12 that appeared in the provisional report of December, 1925.

We have, moreover, for greater clearness substituted the word class for grade as applied to libraries, using grade for departments and for personnel grouping.

For qualifications, duties, and compensation of these grades see the Telford report. We have not attempted in this report to grade the non-professional service to be found in every library above classes 4 or 5, merely giving an estimate based on information furnished by the Bureau of the approximate number of non-professional workers needed in libraries of different sizes.

With these two classifications—that of public libraries and departments, and that of types of positions as a basis—we have worked out the accompanying chart which attempts to show how many grades or classes of workers are needed in a library of a given class, how many assistants in each grade, and where the librarian of each type of library stands in the general scheme. For example, a class 5 public library with a staff of four, a budget of $9000, and a circulation of 45,000 is shown to need at least a grade 3 librarian with one grade 2 assistant and two assistants below grade 2.

The diagram probably needs much change. It is offered for criticism, and the Committee asks the Council to receive the report, not as final, but as a tentative effort to fulfill the purpose for which the Committee was created. If the Council approves this effort and wishes us to continue, the Committee will be glad, as far as possible, to make necessary corrections.
